About the Blackwood Department of Real Estate

The B.S. degree in Real Estate at Virginia Tech is a comprehensive, interdisciplinary academic program that builds on existing strengths of three colleges across campus. The Real Estate curriculum integrates the material students learn in disciplinary courses such as finance, law, marketing, and property management, and offers numerous practical experiences within the academic program. The integration occurs through a university-industry partnership where real estate professionals are actively involved in students' education through guest lectures, mentoring experiences, and by providing internship opportunities.
